

Nolita House

Comfort food and cocktail corner in Nolita
Restaurant

From the Editors

A welcome wind blows down Houston Street, and it's not from the endless stream of delivery trucks. As other Nolita restaurants amp up the gloss and faux French chic quotient, this smallish second-floor restaurant returns to American roots by downplaying its style. The hearty menu is best described as tasteful comfort food, which means that while dishes like macaroni and cheese seem simple, its fresh ingredients make it the best darn mac and cheese you'll ever have. Other familiar flavors include chicken wings, baked berry french toast and pork ribs. The most complicated things get is when they wrap scallops in bacon or serve fine cheese plates in denominations of texture or complexity. In-house cocktails and weekend brunch lure locals from other hotspots around the corner. -
- Yon Motskin (Photo: Noah Kalina)